The Seattle Sports Audio Micro Dry Bag provides splash-proof water protection for your portable music player. A watertight audio jack allows you to plug your headphones into the outside of the bag, while keeping your music player (and other items) dry on the inside. The Audio Micro Dry Bag is made of an eco-friendly urethane-coated 70 denier ripstop Nylon. The bag protects your electronics from the elements and from abrasive forces you'll face in traveling.

We tested the Audio Micro Dry Bag while floating and fishing on the Snake River. There was plenty of room in the bag for both my Ipod and cell phone. The clear window allows for easy operation of the Ipod. There's a cord inside the bag that you plug into the ear phone jack on your Ipod. Then all you need to do is plug your ear phones into the audio jack on the outside of the bag. Very simple set-up.

Don't Try This!

We took our test bag a little further than you'll want to take your bag. This is an underwater picture of the Audio Micro Dry Bag holding a phone and Ipod, with the ear phones plugged in. SEATTLE SPORTS DOES NOT CLAIM THIS IS WATERPROOF. In fact, there's a warning label inside telling you not to do this. The bag stayed water tight during this test. No damage to the Phone or Ipod.
